

RAMO — Website Vision & Execution Brief (FINAL)

Brand Positioning

RAMO is positioned as premium luxury essentials, in the same market tier as Alo Yoga and SKIMS. The brand is aspirational yet attainable, elevated without excess, and rooted in restraint.

RAMO does not chase trends or rely on personality-driven branding. Instead, it communicates confidence through clarity, design discipline, and atmosphere.

Founder Presence

There will be no founder imagery on the website at launch.

The brand should feel architectural, composed, and self-assured. Founder presence exists through philosophy, tone, and intention—not visuals.

Product & Commerce Strategy

Launch Phasing

- Phase 1: Clothing only
(Hoodies and sweatpants)
- Candles and ritual sets will be introduced in later phases.

Availability Model

Products operate on a rotational drop model, similar to Alo and SKIMS:

- Items come in and out of availability
- Scarcity is intentional and curated
- Not all products are always accessible

Pricing Presentation

Pricing is visible on product pages, but understated.

- Product mood and intention lead
- Price appears quietly and confidently
- No emphasis on discounts or urgency language

Sold-Out Experience

A “Notify Me” feature should be present on sold-out items.

- Clean, minimal, non-intrusive
- Email capture feels exclusive, not promotional

Homepage Direction

The homepage should be visual-first.

- Large, high-impact product imagery
- Editorial pacing
- Minimal copy layered intentionally over visuals
- Strong hierarchy and breathing room

The homepage sets the emotional tone before introducing commerce.

Primary Call to Action

Explore Essentials

This should feel calm, confident, and invitational—not sales-driven.

Content & Journal — The RAMO State

The RAMO State launches on day one.

Tone & Style

- Editorial
- Masculine
- Minimal
- Philosophical but grounded

Designed for a male Alo / SKIMS audience:

- Self-mastery
- Calm confidence
- Discipline, rest, clarity
- Wellness without softness clichés

Content should feel like:

- A modern design journal
- Reflections on presence, intention, and self-respect
- Style as a mindset, not performance

Not diary-style.

Not influencer commentary.

Intentional, restrained, and timeless.

Visual & Aesthetic Direction

Imagery

Lifestyle and product imagery will be used and should feel:

- Masculine
- Monochrome
- Deeply clean
- Sculptural
- Editorial

Overall Feel

- Industrial minimalism
- Soft brutalism
- Architectural spacing
- Calm, slow scrolling
- High aesthetic discipline

The site should feel closer to a luxury fashion lookbook than a traditional online store.

Design Principles

- White space is intentional
- Fewer elements, stronger impact
- Typography carries emotion
- Motion is subtle and purposeful

Avoid:

- Trend-heavy animations
- Tech/startup UI
- Loud CTAs
- Visual clutter
- Over-explaining

Email Capture — Entry Ritual

A subtle email capture moment should appear on site entry.

This should feel like:

- An invitation
- A ritual
- A quiet moment of entry

Language should be minimal, calm, and exclusive—not promotional.

Sustainability

Sustainability should be present but nearly invisible.

- No heavy messaging
- No virtue signaling
- Clean, honest, understated

It exists as part of the brand's integrity, not a marketing hook.

Checkout Experience

Checkout should be branded with subtle affirmations or intentional messages.

Examples:

- Short lines
- Calm reassurance
- Self-respect and intention
- No clutter or upsell pressure

The checkout experience should feel like completion of a ritual—not a transaction.

Technical & UX Direction

All technical decisions should prioritize:

- Clean performance
- Minimal friction
- Scalability for future drops
- Long-term brand growth

The site should be built to evolve without redesigning its core structure.

Success Criteria

The website is successful if:

- It immediately feels premium and composed
- It visually aligns with Alo / SKIMS execution level
- It feels masculine, calm, and confident
- Products feel intentional before they feel desirable
- Visitors feel grounded, not rushed

RAMO should feel like a brand that already belongs.

PRIMARY COLORS (Core UI & Brand Identity)

Obsidian Black

#000000

- Primary background color
- Used for headers, footer, hero sections
- Conveys power, depth, and restraint

Graphite Gray

#414141

- Secondary background and UI elements
- Used for dividers, navigation, subtle contrast
- Adds industrial edge and clarity

Fog Gray

#D3D3D3

- Supporting background color
- Used for negative space, soft sections, product backdrops
- Creates balance and calm

Ivory White

#FFFFFF

- Primary text background where needed
- Used sparingly for clarity and breath
- Represents renewal and cleanliness

ACCENT COLOR (VERY LIMITED USE)

Dune Taupe

#B3A49A

- Accent color only
- Used for:
- Small UI details
- Active states (hover, focus)
- Email capture highlights
- Checkout affirmations (text or underline)
- Never dominant
- Never overused

COLOR RULES (IMPORTANT)

- No additional colors introduced
- No gradients unless strictly monochrome
- No warm browns, beiges, or trendy neutrals beyond Taupe
- Contrast should feel architectural, not playful

Color use should always feel intentional, grounded, and calm.
